DE MELLO AND HOAO FIGURE
IN GREAT 12-ROUND DRAW

Ben de Mello and Jim Hoao boxed twelve slashing rounds to a draw at the Orpheum on Saturday night.

The house was well filled and those present saw one of the classic cards of boxing that has been presented to the local public for a long time.

De Mello was a surprise. With nine pounds the worst of the weights, he kept the Hawaiian champion on the move throughout the bout and at times had him on the anxious seat. The further he went the better he got and his finish was as strong as his beginning.

The Hilo Portuguese showed unexpectedly good footwork. He is a boxer of the Battling Nelson type, possessing a couple of good hands and a particularly fine left. His forte is at in-fighting, and his work at close quarters on Saturday night was very effective.

Hoao boxed in his usual careful, clever style. Perhaps he was more careful than usual, recognizing that he was up against a man who would be dangerous until the last ounce of activity was knocked out of him.

His straight left was in evidence as usual and it pecked at de Mello's face continuously. The latter seemed to have a castiron "mug," however, for excepting a "mouse" under both eyes, the Hilo Lion emerged from the contest facially uncut.

The Preliminaries.

The ball started rolling with scheduled six-round go between Cronk and Howard, both of Fort de Russy. The latter carried too many guns for his opponent and knocked him out in the third round with a right swing to the jaw. Sailor Clarke of the U. S. S. Navajo refereed.

In the second preliminary, Young Gang stacked up against Copeland of Fort de Russy and wrote fits to the latter's fist career by planting a stiff left to the heart in the middle of the first round, sending the blonde boxer sprawling. "Spike" Higgins, ex-champion heavyweight of the navy, refereed.

The Main Event.

The main event was preceded by a number of challenges, including deffs from Kupa of Hilo, Sailor Clark, Jockey Willis, Sailor Howard, Jensen of the U. S. S. Thetis, Willer of Fort Shafter, George "Slim" Gilmore, Young Prince and Private Servain of Fort Shafter.

Joe Cohen was introduced as referee and the crowd signified their satisfaction by giving Joe a hearty hand. The men agreed to box, hitting with one arm free and breaking at the word of the referee.

First Round.

Hoao opened carefully with a straight left, which de Mello evaded. His advantage of height and reach were very apparent. De Mello played for the body and landed a couple of good blows. Hoao got in his left once or twice and the round ended with honors about even.

Second Round.

Hoao was more confident and lashed out with left and right, which woke the Portuguese up. The latter bored in, but Hoao showed good defense and ducked beautifully. Hoao scored with his left toward the end of the round, but inflicted no material damage. Hoao's round.

Third Round.

De Mello seemed to be waiting for his man to open up, which he wasn't long in doing. Three times he landed to the face with his left. De Mello rushed in and in a clinch played for the kidneys. Hoao shook him off and swung wildly with his right. De Mello slipped and took the count. Hoao's round.

Fourth Round.

De Mello started in briskly, swinging with right and left and trying to upstart his rangy opponent. He landed on Hoao's eye with a stiff left jab and Hoao retaliated with a hard poke to the heart. Exchanges were about even and the round's honors were divided.

Fifth Round.

De Mello went after his man in great style. He opened up a flood of right and left swings getting home repeatedly to body and jaw. Hoao was on the defensive during most of the round which was easily de Mello's.

Sixth Round.

Hoao showed to advantage in straight-arm work in this round, and had de Mello breaking ground on several occasions. The latter seemed to be watching for an opportunity to get in a knock-out blow and seemed to be content to wait for such even at the cost of severe punning. Hoao's round.

Seventh Round.

De Mello surprised the crowd by wading into his man from the gong. The men got into a clinch and in the infighting that followed de Mello had the advantage. Hoao missed a hard right swing at the close of the round but immediately after got home with a couple of lefts to the dial. De Mello had a shade the best of the round.

Eighth Round.

De Mello was after his opponent in short order and hustled him about considerably. He outboxed Hoao in this round and made his work good by flooring the Hawaiian with a nasty hook to the neck. Hoao seemed to take advantage of the count, however, and was up in a twinkling. He went after de Mello hammer and tongs but was unable to offset the lead which de Mello had already gained. De Mello's round.

Ninth Round.

It was give and take in this round. Both men were strong and willing and both were going at it for all they were worth. De Mello continued his aggressive tactics but Hoao checked him with his precise left and the round ended with neither having any material advantage.

Tenth Round.

Both men slacked off a trifle in this round. They had been boxing at a fast and furious pace and both were glad to ease up a bit. At that they did no loafing. Watching other like cats they hit and blocked on even terms until the end of the round when de Mello swung hard for the jaw but failed to connect. Honors even.

Eleventh Round.

Hoao started in to finish his man in this round. He went after him like a demon and showed speed that was surprising considering how far the battle had gone. He landed at will and had de Mello backing up before his fierce onslaught. De Mello went down before a left hook and took the count. All Hoao's round.

Twelfth Round.

Hoao seemed to have tired himself somewhat by his exertions in the last round. His blows seemed to lack steam. De Mello, on the other hand, made a whirlwind finish. Hoao started in with a couple of gentle lefts but the Portuguese sailed in under his guard and the men clinched. Hoao rushed his man who in turn rushed back. It was the good old straight left against the hook and the wing and a merry mix-up was the result. The crowd was on its feet and roaring throughout the whole round. The fight was anybody's and it looked as if it might be ended by a telling punch delivered at the eleventh hour. Hoao rallied strongly at the finish and the gong sounded with both men hard at it and apparently good for a dozen more rounds. An even round.

SIMPLE HOME REMEDIES

have proven to be not only safer, but far more effective than any combination of drugs.

Nearly forty years ago the now famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was a simple home remedy made by the woman whose name it bears, on her kitchen stove, from the roots and herbs of the field, and supplied to friends and neighbors with-out cost.

The wonderful success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in alleviating the sufferings of woman-kind, has made it known in every home in our land, and now recognized the world over as the standard remedy for female ills.

CHINESE COMPETE IN MANY EVENTS

The Chinese New Year's field and track meet was successfully brought off under the auspices of Sam Hop at the Athletic Park on Saturday afternoon, a fair attendance being present.

The meet was well arranged and everything went off smoothly and enjoyably.

The Chinese Athletic Union were the greatest point-gainers, their total being 71.

At the conclusion of the sports the prizes were distributed by Miss Mary Ah Chuck, Miss Cecilia Ah Chuck and Mrs. Tong Kau.

Lai Tin started in several of the events and his all round good work was the feature of the meeting.

Among the juniors Chang Hin showed promise of developing into a runner and walker of more than average ability.

ALL CHINESE LOSE AGAIN

The All-Chinese baseball team were taken into camp yesterday by an all-ary nine composed chiefly of Fort Shafter and Fort Ruger men. The score was 9 to 7.

The preliminary game between the C. Y. A. and the Honolulu Crackers resulted in a win for the former by the score of 12 to 7.

In the big game two home runs were recorded. Kennor of the soldier nine put the ball over the fence, and L. Tin of the Chinese team also did the trick with a swat to deep center.

Kibbey replaced Smith in the pitcher's box in the fifth inning.
